Hunters' Prospects Bleak

Dove hunters in the Williamson County area were faced with bleak prospects unless things change drastically in the next few days, said the game warden. "I haven't seen enough birds lately to hardly justify going hunting except to just have a good time," the warden said. He added that the birds are not concentrated at all this year.

Farm Bill Previewed

A hastily-gathered group of McGregor farmers got a preview of the new farm bill last week from one of Cong. W.R. Poage's staff. And they seemed to like what they heard. It was explained that the farm bill passed the House and the Senate with different versions. The staff member said the odds are good that House and Senate will approve the present version.

A 30-year-old construction worker was killed in an industrial accident at the TP&L power plant construction project at the Alcoa plant site shortly after 1 p.m. last Tuesday.

According to a story in The Rockdale Reporter, Darrel Wayne Matthews of Bastrop was pronounced dead on arrival at a Rockdale hospital. Matthews was an employee of Brown & Root, Inc., general contractor for the power plant project.

Brown & Root officials said the accident occurred when Matthews apparently walked between a counterweight and the frame of a crane and was crushed. He was an ironworker's helper and had been employed by Brown & Root at the site since Jan. 24. He was married and the father of three children.

Until the agency exhausts its current stock of printed materials, DHR publications and letterheads will continue to carry the DPW heading. But now beginning Monday, telephones will be answered with "Department of Human Resources."

U.S. Dept. of HEW is distributing free a booklet on drug abuses called: "Questions and Answers About Drug Abuse", covering data on sedatives, alcohol, stimulants, tobacco, marijuana, hallucinogens and narcotics.

By writing Consumer Information Center, Dept. 666E Pueblo, Colo., readers and parents can obtain a free copy.

About half a million people use heroin in this country every day while millions use other drugs of less intensity.

Here is a question-answer quiz from National Institute on Drug Abuse. How many answers do you know?

It may be more important than you realize.

1. During which time(s) was drug abuse a problem in the United States?

a. The Civil War; b. the 1950s; c. the 1960s; d. all of the above.

2. In which age group(s) is drug abuse likely to be a problem?

a. 12-16; b. 16-25; c. 25-45; d. 45 and over; e. all of the above.

3. Which of the following is the most commonly abused drug in the United States?

a. Marijuana; b. alcohol; c. cocaine; d. heroin.

4. Which of the following is not a narcotic?

a. Heroin; b. marijuana; c. morphine; d. methadone.

5. Which of the following is not a stimulant?

a. Amphetamine; b. caffeine; c. mescaline; d. methamphetamine.

6. Which of the following is not a hallucinogen?

a. MDA; b. LSD; c. STP; d. mpa.

7. Which of the following drugs does not cause physical dependence?

a. Ethyl alcohol; b. morphine; c. peyote; d. secobarbital; e. codeine.

8. Which of the following has the highest immediate risk to experimenters?

a. Inhalants; b. marijuana; c. nicotine; d. heroin.

9. When does a person who uses heroin become physically dependent?

a. Immediately; b. after four or five times; c. after prolonged use -- 20 times or more; d. different for each person.

10. Which ingredient is most commonly found in compounds sold on the street as "mescaline"?

a. Lysergic Acid diethylamide; b. morphine; c. tetracycline; d. naloxone; e. all of the above.

11. When a person is physically dependent on drugs, what is the primary reason he continues to take the drug?

a. Experience pleasure; b. relieve discomfort; c. escape reality; d. gain acceptance among friends.

12. Which of the following drugs has been used to treat the narcotic addiction problem in the United States?

a. Cyclazocine; b. naloxone; c. methadone; d. psilocybin; e. heroin.

Here are the answers:

1. d. All of the Above. Different periods have had different problems. Opium was used medicinally during the Civil War and many wounded soldiers became addicted. Heroin was prevalent at the turn of the century and again in the 1950s. While drug use of all kinds plagued the country in the 1960s.

2. e. All of the above. Despite the recent focus on drugs and the young, drug abuse is found in all age groups.

3. b. Alcohol. Estimates show that about 9 million Americans are alcoholic persons.

4. b. Marijuana. The substance is no longer legally classified as a narcotic. Its psychological effects are similar to stimulants, sedatives or hallucinogens and its actual effects depend on dose, frequency of use and individual characteristics. Morphine and heroin are natural narcotics; methadone is a synthetic narcotic.

5. c. Mescaline. This is a hallucinogen with effects similar to LSD.

6. d. MPA. The initials do not stand for any known drug. LSD stands for lysergic acid diethylamide; MDA for Mellow Drug of America; and STP for Serenity, Tranquility and Peace.

7. c. Peyote. Physical dependence on mescaline, the active ingredient of the peyote cactus, has not been verified.

8. a. Inhalants. Sniffing aerosols, glue or other volatile substances can result in immediate death. Although "mainlining" heroin into a vein also can result in immediate death, most experimentation with the drug includes only sniffing or skin-popping.

9. d. Different for each person.

10. a. Lysergic acid diethylamide. Analyses indicate LSD is often a major ingredient of mescaline sold on the street, although it varies from city to city. Street mescaline rarely is pure mescaline and often contains no mescaline at all.

11. b. Relieve discomfort. When a person stops taking a drug that he or she is physically dependent on, physical withdrawal symptoms result.

12. d. Psilocybin. This is a hallucinogen which has no accepted medical use. All of the other substances -- including heroin -- have been used at one time or other to treat narcotic addiction.

Crime And Justice In America III

Organized Crime

By FRANCIS A.J. IANNI

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of 15 articles exploring "Crime and Justice in America." In this article, Columbia University Professor Francis A.J. Ianni discusses how organized crime has become an integral part of American economic, social, and political life. This series was written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Supplemental funding for this course was provided by the Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, National Institute of Mental Health.

Fear of having one's home burglarized or of being mugged or held at gunpoint for one's wallet has left few persons indifferent to the "crime problem" in America.

But how many of us who waited in line to see "Godfather Part II" lost any sleep that night worrying about organized criminal activity in American cities?

Organized crime has become such an integral part of the politics and economics of urban life that most Americans do not consider it a personal problem.

Although a number of illegal activities are defined by law enforcement officials as products of organized crime -- drug peddling, gambling, prostitution, extortion, and loan-sharking -- large segments of the public regard some of these crimes as minor "vices" that hurt no one except, perhaps, the tax collector.

Over the years, organized crime -- viewed by many as the special domain of Italian immigrants -- has thrived on public demands for its services and on widespread corruption. It has virtually become an "American way of life."

AN ITALIAN CONSPIRACY?

As early as the last decade of the 19th Century, when 11 reputed "Mafiosi" accused of assassinating the city's police chief were lynched by a New Orleans mob, it was alleged that Italians brought organized crime with them to America. Eighty years after the New Orleans lynchings, a Harris Poll indicated that a majority of Americans -- a decisive 78 to 17 percent of the sample -- believed that "there is a secret organization engaged in organized crime in this country which is called the Mafia."

A number of governmental investigatory bodies have held similar views. In 1951 Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate Crime Committee concluded "There is a nationwide crime syndicate known as the Mafia (whose) leaders are usually found in control of the most lucrative rackets in their cities."

President Lyndon Johnson's 1965 Task Force on Organized Crime similarly concluded, "There is a nationwide alliance of at least 24 tightly knit Mafia 'families' which control organized crime in the United States," whose members "are Italians and Sicilians or of Italian or Sicilian descent." According to the Task Force, these "families," linked together by agreements and obeying a nine-member commission, control most of the illegal gambling and loan-sharking operations in the United States, as well as narcotics importation.

The Task Force also found that the Mafia had infiltrated legitimate businesses and labor unions and had made laisons that gave them power over officials at all levels of government.

AN INDIGENOUS SYSTEM

A small but growing number of law enforcement officials, journalists, and social scientists who have been studying organized crime interpret these same facts quite differently. They see organized crime as an integral part of the American social and economic system, involving (1) segments of the American public who demand goods and services which are defined as illegal, (2) organized groups of criminals who are willing to take the risks involved in supplying them, and (3) the corrupt public officials who protect such individuals for their own profit or gain.

The history of organized crime in America dates back to the days when the lawless bands of the James Brothers, the Youngers, and the Daltons terrorized the western frontier. Then, in the late 19th Century, the "robber barons," -- the Eastern industrial giants -- transformed that frontier into financial empires. It was not, however, until the 20th Century and the growth of the modern city that organized crime, as we know it today, developed.

bling czar in the late '40s and early '50s; and Sam Giancana, Chicago boss from the mid '50s to mid '60s.

The organized crime that now thrives in American cities is rooted in the social and economic history of urban life. Urban history documents how the growth of the American city resulted in complex but demonstrable relationships among minorities, politicians, and organized crime. It is this network of relationships that reveals organized crime in America to be a home-grown variety, indigenous to American soil, rather than a foreign transplant.

We have long known that organized crime and the corrupt political structures of many major American cities enjoy a relationship in which success in one is heavily dependent on the right connections in the other. In this crucial relationship, the criminal is permitted to produce and provide those illicit goods and services which our morals publicly condemn but which our mores privately demand -- gambling, stolen but cheap goods, illegal alcohol, sex and drugs.

In return, the criminal must pay tribute to the political establishment. Social history testifies to how gangsters and racketeers paid heavily into the coffers of political machines in exchange for immunity from prosecution.

GHETTO ESCAPE ROUTE

The persons most willing to take the risks involved in organized criminal activity are, and have traditionally been, those who feel blocked from legitimate access to wealth and respectability. More often than not, these persons have been members of minority groups who settle in the slums of our cities.

Ghetto dwellers and their children have found organized crime an open route to escaping poverty and powerlessness. The successful gangster, like the successful politician, has become a neighborhood model, in addition, proving it is possible to achieve rapid and dramatic success in spite of the police and a variety of oppressors.

At the turn of the century, the Irish were one such minority group. They were quick to band together to form street gangs with colorful names like "The Bowery Boys" and "O'Connell's Guards," and they soon came to dominate organized crime and big city politics. Once they achieved political power (due at least partly to connections and pay-offs surrounding illicit activities), their access to legitimate opportunities increased. Eventually the Irish won respectability in construction, trucking, public utilities, and on the waterfront and no longer needed to become involved in organized crime.

The aftermath of World War I ushered in the era of Prohibition and speculation in the money markets and real estate -- arenas for power and profit over which Jewish and eventually Italian gangs fought for control.

From the 1930s on, Italians moved into positions of power in both organized crime and politics. More have since gained access to legitimate means of acquiring riches and respectability, but the cycle continues as blacks and Hispanics seek to rise like the phoenix, out of the ashes of inner-city ghettos.

PERVASIVE CORRUPTION

Corruption in both government and private business also contributes to the livelihood of organized crime. There is considerable evidence of police indifference and even collusion in organized criminal activities. The police are usually the only visible representatives of the power structure at the street level where graft and corruption are most obvious.

However, price-gouging by merchants, profits from dilapidated housing for absentee landlords, kickbacks to contractors, bribes to inspectors, and the ever-increasing evidence of corruption in the judiciary, city hall, and the federal government are equally obvious to the people on the street of the inner city.

If organized crime is indeed an integral part of American economic, social, and political life, it becomes easier to understand why law enforcement agencies have met with little apparent success in their efforts to control organized crime. The principal and direct responsibility for its prevention rests with the "total" community -- private as well as governmental sectors. Both sectors must make a concerted effort to provide viable alternatives to criminal behavior by offering better economic opportunities, decriminalizing some "vices," and eliminating corrupt practices in both the private and official sectors.

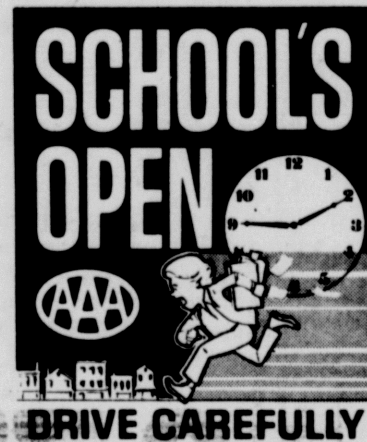

The task is monumental; it requires providing models for public trust and ethical concern at every level of public and private enterprise. If, however, we hope to curb organized criminal activity in America, we must begin to deal with the reality of the situation.

Certainly we should continue to seek out and prosecute the organized criminals. But this is not enough. Organized crime would not survive were it not for corruption in government and industry; nor would it thrive without public support.

The views expressed in COURSES BY NEWSPAPER are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the funding agencies, or the participating newspapers and colleges.

NEXT WEEK: James F. Short, Jr., Professor of Sociology at Washington State University, discusses crime in our city streets.

GET INTO GEAR

Whether you've been riding your motorcycle 10 days or 10 years, the one thing you should always be aware of is that what you wear on a cycle is more important than what you wear in a car. Here, from the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, are some tips on what kind of gear to wear when motorcycling.

The first piece is the helmet. Wearing one when riding is just common sense. For both comfort and protection your helmet should fit snugly but not tightly.

The second is eye protection. You must be able to see clearly to ride safely. Personal preference for face shield or goggles will determine which type of eye protection you wear.

The third: footwear. Sturdy leather boots which rise over the ankle are best for riding.

Gloves: When you wear leather gloves for riding, you are not only protecting your hands but also improving your grip on the handlebars.

Other clothing: Long-sleeved jacket and long pants are the minimal clothing requirements for good riding protection.

By getting into gear—protective riding gear—before you ride, you're well on your way to safe motorcycling.

'Wheelchair Ed' To Get Wheels

By Lois Sapp
Last of 3 Parts

Days pass slowly, but Edwin Marek Jr. is filled with excited anticipation.

'Wheelchair Ed', as he is known to his CB friends, is eagerly awaiting the arrival of another set of wheels, a new van.

Surely it will be here soon, then he will be able to get a job and go visit friends who "need a lift in their lives."

Naturally, the van will have to be fixed so a quadriplegic can drive it. But he is so anxious. He has a whole world to conquer.

For now, he is waiting. Time for more memories.

He remembers December. He has graduated from the Jaycee College and has learned so many things that he can do from his wheelchair.

He is coming home to go to work. That desire has helped keep his determination strong since he was first paralyzed.

But, his plans are quickly squelched. Instead of coming home to a job, he is once again faced with surgery.

An ulcer has formed on his leg and plastic surgery is necessary. Complications set in when a lung collapses and the ordinary surgery takes on a very serious nature.

Two months later he is released from the Temple hospital and is ready once again to join the work force.

Young Junior is well aware of the fact that his parents and older brothers have their own jobs and many chores to do on the family farm. He can not ask them to drive him to and from whatever job he finds. He knows he needs his own transportation.

Rodney and Beverly join their brother in a little CB chatter.

His plight is not simple. To get a van he needs a job and to get a job he needs transportation. The family decided the vehicle came first so the search began.

"My family helped me and we looked everywhere trying to find a van that I could work and pay for," he explained. His family had already been financially drained by the many expenses since his car accident in 1974. He would not ask them to pay for his van.

"Dave Kope of Houston is making it possible for me to buy the van," Junior continued. "A firm in Houston gave me a much cheaper price than I was able to find anywhere else and Dave is fixing it up for me. Dave is known for helping the handicapped and he even gave me a driving test to see if I could handle a vehicle."

Mr. Kope will fix the van with the needed hand equipment and install a lift so he can get in and out without help. Texas Rehabilitation will pay for this equipment, but not for the van itself.

Junior feels fortunate that he has found the van for about $6,000 but admits it will take some hard work to pay for it. Also, he will need a CB radio installed in the event of trouble. This is not considered a necessity by the state agency so it is not furnished.

But with all the hurdles Junior has already jumped, he appears confident that he will be able to get such a job.

"Accounting is my main interest, but I can work in any line of business," he explained the field of work he was trained for. He mastered typing, learning to type 30 words a minute with one hand and admits that he doesn't know how fast he types now that he uses both hands.

Charlene Boutwell, one of his staunch supporters and former teacher, said Junior really needs to continue his studies and become a counselor for the handicapped.

"His great compassion for others is unreal," Mrs. Boutwell said and added "he even worries about this story being written about him because he believes there are other handicapped people who have accomplished more and who need help."

Her opinion was supported by the young man's own statement when he said, "When I get my own van I will be able to make all kinds of house calls and trips. At TIRR (Texas Institute for Rehabilitation and Research) in Houston, I met a man and we became good friends and I would like to visit him. There's another man near here who has recently been paralyzed and I think I could help him."

While he is waiting until he can turn his dreams into reality, he spends much of his time in the front yard talking to motorists on his small CB radio.

'Wheelchair Ed' also does a lot of reading and writes to the many friends he made at the Houston hospital and at college.

He is also planning his life. "If I get a job in Temple or Austin, I want to live there, either buy or rent a place. Course I will have to fix it up so that I can get around in my wheelchair. And I'll have to hire someone to help me do the things that Momma does for me now. But I want to get out on my own. In Temple or the larger cities they have stores fixed up for wheelchairs, so I can get around," he explained.

Yes, with Junior's faith and determination he just may accomplish all he is setting out to do.

One thing is certain, he is a living example of what he tells others. "You got to make up your mind, you're going to do it, and then do it."

Yoe Time Runs Out In Duck Opener

A one-yard keeper to his right sent quarterback Wayne Steamer across for Cameron's only touchdown Friday night before the Taylor Ducks broke a tie to win in the last 39 seconds, 12-6.

Except for a couple of long Duck bombs, the season opener saw a defensive standoff before 4,000 people at Duck Stadium. Cameron had 8 first downs, Taylor 9.

Duck halfback Gerald Davidson topped a 47-yard drive when he cracked over from the 1 to score the second Taylor touchdown. The clock showed 39 seconds left in the game. The point after failed when an attempted pass was intercepted by a Yoe halfback.

Yoe Halfback Dave Rosemond seconds later gave the crowd a start when he took the Taylor kickoff 45 yards, finally pulled down at the Duck 35.

Steamer tried five quick sideline pass plays, but the effort ran out of time at the Duck 14.

Taylor's first touchdown came on a 68-yard bomb which cleared a Yoe halfback's ill timed jump and hit Duck end Michael Pittman for 68 yards and a score. Pittman ran into the end zone from about the Yoe 15. Pass was first play of the series.

The point after failed. Taylor 6, Cameron 0.

Following a scoreless third quarter, Yoeman Dutch Short covered a Mike Pittman punt fumble at the Duck 13 yardline.

Steamer sent Cameron backs at the line six times, tying the score himself with a one-yard move to his right and the touchdown. The point after was blocked.

The recovery came with only 5:32 left in the game after the Yoemen had been trailing for two quarters.

The scoring drive consumed 21/2 minutes of the late fourth quarter and seemed to point to a 6-6 tie, about like the 0-0 tie between the two clubs in 1976.

But the Ducks took the next kickoff, driving 47 yards in just 7 plays. Two passes good for 6 yards and 17 yards kept the Duck drive going for two first downs. Davidson capped the drive with his one-yard TD drive.

The Yoe offense went five times in the first half against the Taylor line, but had to kick out of trouble or give over the ball.

During the third quarter the ball changed hands eight times with - out any gains beyond either team's 30.

Dutch Short broke the stalemate with about 5 minutes left. His fumble recovery set up the lone scoring drive.

Cameron backs found yardage short. Rosemond picked up only 45 yards in 17 carries and fullback 29 yards in 8 carries.

It was simply a night in the trenches, lighted by two long Taylor bombs which sent Taylor's passing yardage to 117 with five out of 9 completions. Cameron had only 39 yards in the air, 90 on the ground.

Buckholts Beats Abbott, 42-18

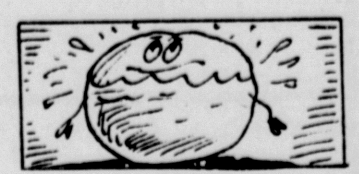

The Badgers of Buckholts almost doubled the total yardage on Abbott in winning the opening game at home Friday against Abbott, 42-18.

Monty Williams gained 194 yards rushing, joining Dudley Hsler, who intercepted two passes, in top defensive efforts for the evening.

In the wide-open six man football game, Buckholts netted 290 yards on the ground while holding the visitors to 182.

Badger passing accounted for nine completions in 14 attempts while Abbott hit nine out of 10.

A lot of long plays gave Buckholts 7 first downs to Abbott's 4, including 174 yards in the air.

An orange is about 87 percent water.

All jobs will be on a 3-shift operation and rotate weekly (days, nights, evenings) and will include many weekend shifts and considerable overtime.

PAY Start at $3.45 per hour on day shift, $3.60 on evening shift, and $3.75 on night shift. Then receive automatic raises to a minimum of $4.20 per hour on day shift. BENEFITS

Outstanding insurance programs, vacations, generous bonuses, 9 paid holidays, and good working conditions.

SECURITY - No layoffs have been experienced at RWP, a superior profit sharing plan in addition to a pension program, and promotions from within with planned growth. There are also some job openings for weekend work only which would be a good opportunity for a "Second job" for persons who could work on varying Saturday and Sunday shifts only.

This could be your chance to be considered for a permanent job with a secure future of a good supplemental job.

When you become a member of WILSON ART, you are valued as an individual.

Apply in person at Ralph Wilson Company - 600 General Bruce Drive - Temple, Texas - 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. - Monday, September 12, through Friday September 16. Or SPECIAL HOURS of 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday.

The thin vapor coating of aluminum prevents solar radiation from passing through glass by reflecting it back to the exterior. Without causing the temperature of the glass to rise significantly, the coating thus minimizes undesirable secondary radiation from it. Although visible light is reduced, the level of illumination remains perfectly satisfactory. Under winter conditions Magiostick® renders glass partially reflective to long wave (or room temperature) radiation as well, thus reducing heat loss. Glass treated with MSTL-300-20 has a reflectivity of 46% to this radiation compared with about 10% for untreated glass. This great assists in the conservation of white warmth inside a building.
